

DOCUMENT THE COLORS YOU USE

Sandy Philips says to test multiple colors before picking the one you want. When working on a picture, place a piece of paper next to your work to test colors. Once you decide on a color and use it, flip the picture over and make a list with a color swatch and the name; that way the colors used remain with the picture. It's also helpful when you pick up your workspace and come back to it. Flipping your picture over will let you know what colors you used and what colors to pull.
